

9. Five years ago, the stage was set to move full bore into socialism with power no longer residing in the states but rather concentrated in the federal government.
10. The strategy was for Hillary Clinton to orchestrate the transformation but something entirely unexpected occurred. A non-politician but a rich businessman from New York City joined a gaggle of Republican wannabes running for president. He was not the usually bland, run-of-the-mill Republican.
11. Instead, he was as unorthodox as far as politics are concerned. He had ideas about how things ought to be in a free society and said them out loud behind the campaign slogan, "Make America Great Again," to which the citizens voted a resounding, "Amen!"
12. Usual politician, Donald John Trump is not. He is, finally, a problem solver, an innovator, yes, a deal maker, his most recent, stunning achievement is the astounding success to bring peace to the Middle East where the region's Arab nations joined Jewish Israel in a Middle East peace agreement.
13. President Trump is not the usual smooth-talking yet boring politician but a problem-solver and a deal maker that renewed the power inherent in a free society. Yet his unorthodox personality is disliked by many although his actions have restored American hegemony.
14. Trump is to politics as George Patton was to the U.S. Army. In World War II, the American forces were led by General Dwight D. Eisenhower. The British forces were led by Field Marshall Bernard L. Montgomery. Because the Brits had been in the war from its beginning, Eisenhower reluctantly allowed Montgomery to command an attempted invasion of Germany from the Netherlands and dubbed Operation Market Garden.
15. Eisenhower knew that Montgomery did not have the military moxie to pull off the attack but because he was the British commander, he allowed the mission to go forward while realizing that the effort would fail.

Almost every feature of Operation Market Garden ... simply affirmed what had already become evident in North Africa, that Montgomery was generally incapable of conducting anything but stolid defenses or attacks with generous lead times, material superiority and no urgent deadline during the battle. One might even go so far as to say that Market Garden showed Montgomery and the army he had led created in the worst possible light, revealing serious lapses in planning and tactical command.

It was indeed a powerful demonstration that Montgomery could not conduct a narrow strike across the Netherlands and into Germany.⁵

16. What was ultimately required was for the Allies to get their forces into Germany. That opportunity emerged with the success of the Normandy Invasion, June 6, 1944. It was during the following campaign that a key but unorthodox general was instrumental in the Allies' victory at Bastogne:

The apogee of Patton's career came with the dramatic sweep of his Third Army across northern France in the summer of 1944 in a campaign marked by great initiative, ruthless drive, and disregard of classic military rules. Patton's armored units were not operational until August 1, almost two months after D-Day, but by the end of the month, they had captured Mayenne [mä yén], Lavál, Le Mans [Le Mǎⁿ], Reims [ré^mz], and Châlons [shä lóⁿ].

In December 1944 the Germans launched a massive surprise counterattack in the Ardennes Forest, encircling the U.S. Airborne Division at Bastogne, Belgium. Supreme Allied Commander General Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered the Third Army to relieve Bastogne, and Patton repositioned his force with astonishing speed. Advance elements of the Third Army reached Bastogne's tenacious defenders on December 26, and additional reinforcements followed over subsequent days. Patton's forces continued to push the German's back, and by the end of January 1945, the Third Army had reached the German frontier. On March 1 those forces took Trier [trir], precipitating one of the most famous exchanges of the war. When Patton received a message instructing him to bypass the city because it would take four divisions to capture it, Patton replied, "Have taken Trier with two divisions. Do you want me to give it back?" Over the next ten days, they cleared the entire region north of the Moselle River, trapping thousands of Germans.⁶

(End RECK-20.09. See RECK20-10 for continuation of study at p. 91.)

⁵ Thomas E. Ricks, "Eisenhower manages Montgomery," in The Generals: American Military Command from World War II to Today, (New York: The Penguin Press, 2012), 87–88.

⁶ Alex Lovelace, "George Patton": <https://www.britannica.com/biography/George-Smith-Patton>.

17. Patton was trained in the art of war at the United States Military Academy at West Point. The part of that training that interested him most was the strategy and tactics necessary to suppress and ultimately overwhelm the enemy. Unlike Bernard Montgomery's penchant for a slow, grinding-it-out approach, Patton favored rapid advance and assault designed to overwhelm and exhaust the opposition. Because of the necessary involvement of British armed forces, General Eisenhower tolerated Montgomery, but knew Monty was not capable of successfully leading an army in the fierce encounters demanded in the war with Nazi Germany. Eisenhower needed someone who could penetrate the German defenses and allow the Allies to go all the way to Paris and do it as quickly as possible. The man he turned to was George Patton, commander of the U.S Third Army.

The comparisons that may be applied to the current crisis in the United States calls upon such a personality to illustrate the current crisis. Among the fifteen or so men who ran for president in 2016 were at best Bernard Montgomerys. The opposition was a woman whose ambitions were focused on the transformation of the American system of government into a progressive nightmare. She was so confident she would win against a flamboyant businessman who was best known as the host of a television program that she failed to campaign in several Blue states assuming their electoral votes were hers. However, the man she ran against for the White House was not a Montgomery but a Patton, and like the man he exemplified, Donald J. Trump was the unorthodox but necessary personality who was ready to actually accomplish what the Montgomerys had consistently promised but never were able or interested in actually doing.

With this in mind, consider this, "Who presently plays the part of the priests of Baal and Asherah in our War Two example?" None other than the faux Nazis, Brownshirts, and terrorists that for months have burned and pillaged Blue cities while killing innocent people in the process with impunity.

The unorthodox, rookie politician with victory on his mind is the twenty-first century Patton who has been under total assault by those who want to take him down so they can transform the nation. Patton was assassinated because of his unorthodox but extremely successful methods of warfare. President Trump, with potentially four more years in the presidency, is and remains a prime target from the disloyal opposition.

The Blue hued Democrat Party, which has now taken on the bright-scarlet shade of communism, has thrown every possible accusation and lie at him yet he is still standing promising that he will continue his efforts to overcome these present-day priests of Baal.

He is our Lone Ranger who has accepted the challenge: “There’s no time for argument. I’m going on alone. I’ll offer myself as a target to those men.”
Ergo: Donald Trump is our present-day Elijah!

Here is how you may contribute your personal impact to preserve our freedoms in the present contest: Vote! This is no time for fear. This is the present, critical moment in the history of our country. Hundreds of thousands of men and recently women have placed their lives on the line to stand in the gap between our nation’s citizens and her enemies.

Many have died, many have been wounded, and many others have gone unscathed in defense of our client nation in its War for Independence, the War between the States, World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, the Middle East. They have stood in the gap so you could enjoy and continue the freedoms supplied by this client nation.

Now the present enemy is a fifth column inside our walls. This time our artillery is not weaponry but the freedom and obligation to vote. Election day is Tuesday, November 3. If you are not registered to vote it is too late to do so in the State of Missouri since the date to do so is past.

If you want to vote “absentee” there are several qualifications to meet to do so. If you are ill, homebound, or over age 65 you can vote without signature by a notary. If are under 65 but away from your polling place on election day, you may vote absentee with a notary’s signature.

There is the option of voting by U. S. Mail and it has to be notarized, but this is primarily a hoax to fudge the numbers in favor of the terrorists. A vote for a Republican candidate is likely to be delivered to a dumpster.

The normal way to vote with the certainty it will be counted is to show up at your polling place on November 3.

I repeat: This is no time for fear. Wear your mask if you must but show up and vote. Many have died or were wounded in our nation’s history to protect your privilege to do so. So, get your patriotic blood up and:

Buckle down, Winsocki, buckle down,
You can win, Winsocki, if you knuckle down;
If you don’t give in, take it on the chin,
You are bound to win
If you only buckle down.¹

And go vote.

¹ “Buckle Down, Winsocki”: music and lyrics by Hugh Martin and Ralph Blane from: Best Foot Forward in the Broadway production (1941) and soundtrack of the film (1943).

The current crisis is orchestrated by those who are in opposition to the documents that founded this nation. These are officially referred to as State Papers and include four elements that establish order within the commonwealth: (1) The Declaration of Independence, (2) The Constitution of the United States, (3) The Bill of Rights, and (4) subsequent Amendments.

These four work in concert to protect and insure the freedom and protection of every citizen. The Declaration's second paragraph begins with these statements:

"We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among them are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness—that to secure these Rights Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the Consent of the Governed."

The Constitution's Preamble introduces its seven Articles:

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish the Constitution of the United States of America.

The Bill of Rights declares certain specific rights that each citizen of the United States possesses and isolates these rights to such a degree that its opening statement in Amendment I reads, "Congress shall make no law." These rights are said to be held in perpetuity by the phrase found in Amendment's I, II, and IV, "the right of the people."

Currently, two subjects have been expressed by the Blue Party. First, that in an election year, the president cannot nominate, and with advice and consent of the Senate, appoint Judges to the supreme court. Here is how the Constitution reads in Article II, Section 2:

(The President) shall have Power ... to nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Judges of the supreme court.

Also proclaimed by the Blue Party is the admission to the Union of two new states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. The Constitution has this to report on this idea in Article 5, Section 3:

New states may be admitted by the Congress into this Union.

To be precise about this sentence, Article I, Section 1 defines the term “Congress” as, “All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in ‘a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.’” Both houses must confirm the addition of a new state. This is another reason you must go and vote for your senator, if up for reelection, and representative.

The reason I am presenting this study of, A Reckoning, is because our nation is under assault from the Dark Side. Every freedom-loving citizen must consider this election as possibly the most important one of his lifetime and also for the nation’s future existence in the manner of its founding.

God is in His heaven. He has created the entity called Client Nation for the protection, preservation, and communication of His immutable Word for the purpose of making it possible for believers to use the privilege of becoming good witnesses for the Prosecution in the midst of the Invisible War.

The citizens of European client nations have all failed in doing their duties. Are we, believers in the United States, on the verge of joining them? Possibly. However, the Covid is really not the real danger we face. The real and present danger is fear and those who are afraid have no faith rest, and those with no faith rest are victims of the Dark Side.

Here is what I have come to suspect. All the regulations spouted by the Illuminati are not designed to prevent the spread of Covid but to indoctrinate, by means of fear, the entire population into doing what they are told. Those who figure out the rules of this cosmic game of thrones will reject this propaganda. If the Blue Party gets control of this country next month, then its acolytes will shower down starting January 21, 2021, and those who disobey will be dealt with accordingly.

According to President Trump, the treatment he received for his case of Covid seems to have been a cure rather than a vaccine. If this proves to be true, then the ongoing fear of the disease will be rapidly suppressed. Include that possibility in your prayers.

We now return to our passage in:

1 Kings 18:28 So they cried with a loud voice and cut themselves [hithpa‘el imperfect of the verb ךָתַךְ (gathath): the action of the hithpa‘el is intensive, the imperfect tense indicates continuous action] according to their custom [מִשְׁפָּט (mishpat): “tradition”] with swords and lances until the blood gushed out on them.

The priests of Baal had successfully fooled the people of Israel into believing that their propaganda about a false god was the gospel truth. It was a charade and over the course of one day, Elijah exposed their lies.

The majority of Israel's population had systematically turned away from divine viewpoint and instead became indoctrinated by the Dark Side's cosmic propaganda.

The historical context of this passage is the dispensation of Israel. These Jews were responsible to Yahweh to be good witnesses for the Prosecution before the Divine Court of Appeals.

Instead, they have opted for Lucifer's counterfeit religion. These Jews supported Ahab's state religion of Baal, its theology promoted by 450 priests of Baal.

In addition, Ahab allowed his demon-possessed wife, Jezebel, to accumulate 400 prophets who represented, Asherah, the alleged wife of Baal.

The Northern Kingdom followed this madness and had done so to the point that God instituted the three-and-one-half year drought to get these Jews' attention. The drought was designed to refocus their souls away from demonism back to the orthodox worship of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

The failure of the priests of Baal to solicit from him the desired fire upon the altar has left them completely exhausted by the end of the day:

1 Kings 18:29 When midday was past, they raved (hithpa'el imperfect of the verb, נָבָא (nava') until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice; but there was no voice, no one answered, and no one paid attention.

It is now past noon and all their crying and bleeding still failed to solicit a response from Baal yet they continued on unabated indicated by the hithpa'el imperfect of the verb, נָבָא (nava'): "they raved." This verb generally means "to prophesy," but the hithpa'el imperfect intensified their pleadings as they continuously pled with Baal to start them a fire.

They continued in this wailing until the "offering of the evening sacrifice (3:00 P.M.)." Desperate to successfully solicit Baal's appearance, the priests frantically continued their ravings to Baal while cutting their bodies with lances. This desperate scene continued until they collapsed in futility.

Yet, the priests of Baal had not solicited one flicker of a flame from Baal whose alleged voice had not answered their pleas or even paid them any attention. After all these carryings-on there was no fire under the altar.

